Most schools claim to prepare students for the world of work, but Milton Secondary School takes the claim very seriously. Before they even join the school, future pupils get an informal interview at their primary school to discuss their hopes and preferences for the future. The emphasis on employment continues during the first two years at Milton, and then in the 5. third year all pupils spend a day doing work experience at a local company. Two years later, this becomes a whole week spent with a company, usually arranged by the students themselves

Throughout their secondary education, students have professional careers advice, which costs the school over £30,000 a year. Head teacher Harriet Downs believes it's worth it, though: 'Teachers aren't trained as careers advisers,' she says, 'so we bring in professional help. It's part 10. of a co-ordinated programme that aims to make students aware of the employment options available, and how to make the most of them. It's too late to start talking about work in their final year.'

Until recently, business experts looking for examples of leadership tended to focus on great army leaders or politicians of the past; the comparison between business and sport was often missed. But the two fields have many similarities. After all, if you're competing in markets, what better place is there to look for leadership qualities than in professional sport, which is all

5. about competition?

In both business and in sport, the simple answer to the question of what makes a great leader is: success. How to achieve it is rather less simple. One thing, though, is true in all fields, at any level. You have to be confident, determined and so on. But there isn't one type of person who fits every situation and these personal qualities are not enough in themselves.

10. There's a difference between leading and managing. Leadership is about establishing a direction for the group to follow. Management is more about keeping them going in that direction. Leadership without management results in rushing towards new goals without worrying about how you reach them. In contrast, management without leadership means that everything tends to stay as it is. You need to change between the two according to the situation.
